Doctoral Dissertation
Award

JOURNAL OF MANAGEMENT
STUDIES

The Grigor McClelland Doctoral Dissertation Award is an annual prize of £5,000 awarded to innovative scholarship demonstrated within a PhD thesis in any discipline within management and organisation studies. The award is supported by the Journal of Management Studies (JMS) and the Society for the Advancement of Management Studies (SAMS), a charitable organisation which supports capacity building in business and management research.

Grigor McClelland was the founder of SAMS, the founding editor of JMS, and the founding Director of Manchester Business School.

Scope

The Grigor McClelland Doctoral Dissertation Award aims to promote and recognize innovative PhD research in management and organization studies. The Award does not specify any preference towards topics or methods; its primary focus is to recognize and award doctoral research that is expansive and imaginative in that it covers significantly new terrain or counters existing thinking within management and organisational research.

Eligibility

To be eligible for the 2018 Grigor McClelland Doctoral Dissertation Award, candidates must have completed their doctoral dissertation and received the final award of their PhD or DBA within 2017.

Application process

Candidates who wish to be considered for the award are asked to submit:

1. One digital copy of their entire dissertation in English.
2. An abstract of up to 5 pages single-spaced, (tables or bibliography are not included in the page limit). The abstract should summarise the thesis and detail the originality of the theory development and empirical results as well as the implications for research and practice.
3. Confirmation that the work submitted is an independent and original piece of research (under the supervision of senior colleagues).
4. Proof of the final award of their qualification (i.e. certificate, or similar).

Applications for the award should be electronically submitted to Margaret Turner, SAMS Administrator, (business.sams@durham.ac.uk) before 16:00 GMT on Wednesday, 28th February, 2018.

Award Committee and Judging Process

The shortlisting and selection of the award winner will be carried out by a panel of senior scholars within management and organization studies. The panel consists of representatives from SAMS, JMS and EGOS. The prize will be awarded to the work that, in the opinion of the panel, was truly novel and creative in its theory development, use of methods or the empirical contexts covered in the dissertation.

The winner will be announced during a special session at the 2018 EGOS conference in Tallinn, Estonia. In this special session the shortlisted candidates for the award will present their research, followed by the award presentation and a reception. A stipend will be awarded to each of the finalists to cover reasonable travel and accommodation expenses for attending this session, plus conference registration.
